MHS Graduation Exercises Held

By FRANCES STOGDILL

Dr. James Gee, president of East Texas State College, at Commerce, brought the address to Boyd High School graduates in Commencement exercises Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The largely attended program was held at Newsome Stadium. The center section was reserved for the graduates, who filed into the stadium as Ralph White played the processional. He also played the recessional, which closed the program.

John Barry, pastor of the East Christian Church voiced the prayer which opened the program, and also gave the benediction.

Mrs. Melba Davenport presented her choral group in selections, as special music for the evening with Miss Beth Finney, as the accompanist. For the class song, Mrs. W. R. Hollis, was at the piano.

Hightlight of the evening was presentation of honor graduates who were Miss Peggy Lee, with an average of 95.62, and Donald Boren, whose average was 94.63. Miss Lee is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Lee while Donald is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Boren.

D. F. Douglas, principal of the High School, presented the honors, and also named ten other students, with an average above 90, as follows: Sharon Lenderman, Ellis Dodson, Don Mitchell, Gwenda Miller, Wanda Griffin, Alice Stephens, Myrna Turner, Lottie Gilbert, Nancy Carter and Billy Dickerson.

Diplomas were presented to the 103 graduates by Fred McKinney, president of the McKinney School Board.

Supt. Hailds Pearce introduced the speaker of the evening, paying tribute to his fine work as head of the East Texas State College, and also a biographical sketch of his educational background.

Dr. Gee opened his remarks with the story "At times one is reminded of the relative values in life by the story of the old dog who boasted to his fellows that he could outrun anything, until a rabbit jumped in front of him and soon left the dog behind. When the dog slunk back to his companions he said 'well, it was this way—the rabbit was running for his life and I was only running for my dinner." Too many people are just working for their dinner and merely wishing for success."

This story brought out the idea that high school attendance and graduation are not only measures of success but indicative of a desire for further and contintinuing successes throughout life.

Dr. Gee quoted statistics on the average costs of education as follows:

Elementary Graduate, $116,000.

High School Graduate, $165.-000.

College Graduate, $268,000.

Average Cost of Colege Education, $9,000.

Average Cost at ETSC is about, $2,400.

The financial estimates involving enhanced earning power by graduation from elementary, high school and college, should be self-explanatory.

At this point the speaker delved into a discussion of vital contributions to one's success-potential throughout life. These were divided into three categories:

Development— commencement; cannot stand still; tools of learning; and cannot peddle with nothing in your cart.

Service to others — All must serve others in the same way, good or bad; each serve at the highest occupational level of success; to be respected but not feared may be a mark of success; right attitude toward military service. As illustrations he asked the graduates to remember "Valley Forge," "The Argonne Forest," "The Hindenburg Line," "The Ardennes," "The Marne," "The Coral Sea," "Tirawa," "Okinawa," "Suribaya," "Pork Chop Hill" and "Heartbreak Ridge."

Consideration and courtesy for others—acceptance of responsibility; the price tag on our continued freedom; do not expect others to continue to do things for you that you should do yourselt; courtesy to others develops courtesy in return; and thankful and appreciate of what others do for us daily.

Dr. Gee elaborated upon the foregoing remarks, each of which began with the initials "D", "S", "C", the customary abbreviation for our nation's second highest award for valor—DSC, the Distinguished Service Cross.

The inspiring message was closed as Dr. Gee quoted a definition of success by Dr. David Wistar Daniel, English teacher at Clemson College, South Carolina:

"He who can meet sorrow without bitterness and is not coarsened by prosperity, or who is defeated and yet fights on, or is triumphant and yet remains humble, who can carry the hopefulness of youth over into the deeping shadows of age, and who when the sun of life is setting is confident of the man—that man has lived well."

Baccalaureate Services Held Sunday Night

A most inspiring message was given the members of Boyd High School graduation class at baccalaureate services held Sunday night at the First Methodist Church. Rev. H. C. Hoy, pastor of the church, brought the sermon, using as his subject "Jesus's Laws of a Growing Life."

The church was beautifully decorted, with ferns and potted plants, outlining the church rostum, with baskets of white flowers used at vantage points.

As Mrs. Jerry Hart played the organ, the 104 graduates, in their white caps and gowns, single filed into the auditorium, occupying the entire center section. Mrs Hart also played the recessional as the members of the class retired from the church.

Congregational singing of the hymns "Stand Up, Stand Up For Jesus" and "All Hail The Power of Jesus' Name," was led by Charles Carmen.

Dr. T. R. Leen, pastor of the First Christian Church, gave the opening prayer while the benediction was voiced by Rev. Tommy Watson of the Waddill Street Baptist Church.

Special music for the service was presented by Miss Judy Howell whose solo was "God Is Taking Care of Us."

In his message to the young people, Rev. Hoy explained the meaning of a growing life—the body, the mind and the soul. He used numerous verses of scriptures, as well as personal experiences to illustrate points in his talk. The laws of a growing life, outlined below, were expanded upon:

The law of obedience to the will of God as the first rule of life.

The law of efficiency — the elimination of things that hinder.

The law of purity of service and forgiveness.

The story of the Good Samaritan.

The law of sacrificial giving and forgiving love.

The law of integrity—the harmony of thought with the outward dead.

The law of increase.

The law of reverence for God and persons.

Trust in God.

The law of selfishness—Christ gave himself for the redemption of our sins.

The church was filled to capacity for the service.

Siren To Sound Tornado Warning

The Ground Observer Corps, in cooperation with the City Police Department, has set up a warning system to be used when tornadoes are sighted in this area.

G. B. (Sonny) McGhee, Chief Observer for the G.O.C. unit here, announces that the big siren at the City Hall will be sounded with three short blasts, and repeated in 30 seconds with another three short blasts, when a tornado is headed toward the city.

Mr. McGhee reports that when a bad cloud is sighted near by, squad cars from the City Police Department will be dispatched to the City limits in four directions. They will report to the City Hall, the direction in which the cloud is moving, and if it appears headed toward McKinney, the warning signals will be sounded.

This signal system is designed as a precautionary measure, allowing the citizens to seek shelter and protect themselves, in case a tornado strikes.

Chief McGhee, states there are only four teams active in the Ground Observer Corps unit here and that volunteers are badly needed. During alerts the teams are sometimes forced to stay on their posts for as long as 24 hours. Additional volunteers would enable the unit to better carry on their work and at the same time relieve those persons who are so willingly giving their time to the unit.

The football stadium is used as local post headquarters for holding aircraft alerts.

The G.O.C. meets each second and fourth Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock at the Chamber of Commerce office. Men and women are badly needed to volunteer their services in adding this civil defense program.

Capt. Roy F. Hall Explains Tornado Scare

This article is written to help allay the fears of those who, like me, are afraid of tnadoes. Please remember this: of the many reports of sighting a tornado funnel, few, if any, or accurate. The scud cloud, which precedes a rainstorm, looks like a tornado funnel at times, and fools inexperienced observers. Remember too, that we have had just two damaging tornadoes in Collin County in the last thirty years; the one at McKinney in 1948 and the other east of McKinney and at Melissa and Anna last April 2. There have been only two tornadoes in the county, so far as I know, after June the first, and only two after midnight. Of the few true funnels sighted, only about one in ten ever reach the ground. The electrical storm about midnight Saturday scared many people, but there was no tornado condition, and the danger was nil. We are about out of the tornado season in this county.

City And County Are Recovering From "Wild" Week-End

By FRED DICKINSON

McKinney and Collin County are beginning to recover in bright sunshine Monday morning after a jittery Saturday night of wild weather.

A series of lightning packed thunderstorms drifted across the county during the night dumping out 1.60 inches of rain and sending creeks and rivers on a rampage.

It was one of the wildest Saturday nights McKinney's good citizens could remember. The area slept late and arose sleepy eyed after this climax to two months of thundering weather.

Highways in numerous places over the county were cut by the high water the storms dumped out during the day and night on already rainsoaked fields and streams. The State Highway Patrol, the Sheriff's Department, the City Police and the Ground Observer Corps watched carefully and reported several tornadoes, and the city got its first tryout of the new fire siren alarm system for these deadly whirling weather monsters that have plagued the Southwest so much, this spring.

A total of 4.35 inches of rainfall were reported by Captain Roy F. Hall, local observed for the Weather Bureau. This amount fell in three distinct series of storms starting at 12:15 a. m., Saturday and ending at 3 a. m., Sunday, a little over twenty-six hours.

This big rain brought the year's total to an astounding 35.49 inches and the total for the month of May to 12.41 inches. The annual average rainfall is 39.24 inches.

The latest deluge, coupled with backwater from Lake Lavon, cut traffic on Highway 24 from McKinney to Farmersville for the first time in history, since the building of the new and present road in 1935.

There was no flooding of homes in McKinney or vicinity, although some homes South of the city were threatened for a short time by high waters on tributaries running into Wilson Creek. Roads in the Southeast part of the county were cut in a number of places. Added to mud on some secondary roads, this made travel by boat easier in the flooded areas, and a lot of people in the area used this mode of transportation.

The tornado alert, three short blasts at thirty second intervals on the fire siren, here, was used about 11 p. m., Saturday. One of several torandoes spotted during the night was seen at that time in the Northern part of the county. The response to the alarm was good. Hundreds of McKinney families took the standard precautions—a trip to a storm cellar or finding the safest place in the neighborhood. Fortunately, the twister dissipated without hitting the city.

The Ground Observer Corps, headed by Eric B. Nelson, supervisor; Sonny McGhee, chief observer, and Frank Garcia and Clayton Tompkins, assistant chief observers, were on duty from 11:30 a. m. until 8 p. m., Saturday and again from 11:30 p. m., Saturday, until 2 a. m., Sunday morning. Seventeen of these volunter observers were on duty during the Saturday watch and six on the Saturday night lookout. They have been called out eleven times for this important work during the spring's bad weather.

The State Highway Patrol had two patrol cars on duty watching for tornadoes, Saturday night. One group had Patrolmen Dan F. Nowlin and Sam Purtle of McKinney, Sergeant Everett Brandon of Sherman, in charge of this subdistrict, and Lieutenant C. H. Cheshire of Dallas, second in command of the Dallas district, looking for twisters in the Northern and Eastern part of the county. Patrolmen P. N. Stephens and Jack Christian of Richardson were in another patrol car watching in the Southern and Western parts of the county. The Nowlin-Purtle group spotted one twister East of Van Alstyne and chased it past Westminster to near Leonard where the Fannin County patrol picked it up about the time it lifted back into the sky and dissipated. The tornado was on the ground part of the way but did little damage. This occurred about 7 p. m. Later, another tornado was spotted West of McKinney. The Ground Observer Corps under Supervisor Nelson also reported a tornado Northwest of McKinney at about ten minutes until one, Sunday morning. It dissipated before it reached the city and never touched the ground. This was seen at the beginning of the violent series of thunderstorms that rocked the area from that time until 3 p. m. with some of the worst lightning and thunder ever seen and heard here. Evidently, this one packed a wallop, because it brought a warning from the Carter Field Weather Bureau until to McKinney that this cloud had strong tornadic possibilities, according to their radar sightings.

Heaviest rainfall reported was at Anna which had 4.10 inches Saturday and Sunday morning. The Southern part of the county did not receive as much with some unofficial rain gauges, West of Allen, showing 1.20 inches. A mile or so North of this area, other gauges registered 3.20 inches. The storms developing Southwest of Fort Worth drifted Northeastward, starting floods in the Tarrant County capital, and coming on Northeast towards McKinney, Anna and Bonham.

At Lavon Dam, the floodgates were opened to three feet and three inches, at 6 o'clock, Sunday morning, to accommodate the tremendous inflow into the lake. Water splashed over the top of the floodgates during the day. The gates were turned back to three feet at 10 a. m. and then reopened to three feet, three inches at 3 p. m. Hassell L. Holder, reservoir supervisor, stated that the Corps of Engineers had a man in a radio equipped automobile checking on the levee districts below the dam, which were generally holding all right. A large crowd gathered in the area around the dam, Sunday afternoon, to see the lake and the release of the water through the dam. The road across the dam was the best route through the area since the floodwaters have cut State Highway 78 below the dam at a point where a low detour is necessary because of road construction. Water was running about two feet under the St. Louis & Southwestern Railway trustle and bridge below the dam.

The dam and lake were fulfilling their mission of holding floodwaters off the Trinity below them. What sort of tremendous proportions damage in the rich lowlands below the dam would have reached without this deterrent can only be conjectured.

Rainfall on the East Fork, Ticky, Sister Grove and Pilot Creek watersheds, all of which flow into the lake, have been enormous, this spring.

At Princeton, Walter B. Gantt, onion grower, and Marvin Dinsmore, area representative for the Progressive Farmer magazine, declared, Sunday morning, that the rainfall in that area has been gauged at 40 inches, already. Dinsmore, who helped build Highway 24 back in 1935, says this last rise on Sister Grove and Pilot Creeks is the worst he can remember since 1913 when a tremendous rainfall sent a wall of water coursing down the creeks and did enormous damage.

These two creeks flow under Highway 24 about a half-mile apart, two miles East of Princeton. After the Saturday night deluge, they spilled water across the road. The State Highway Patrol, working with a pre-arranged plan, notified Oscar L. Stewart of McKinney, County Maintenance Foreman, and he set up road blocks. Highway Department employees advised every motorist of the water danger. By 9 a. m., Sunday some cars were able to creep through, but by mid-afternoon, rushing floodwaters from the Northern part of the county, commenced to hit the road again at a faster and deeper clip, and very few cars could get through. Officials were threatening to completely close the Highway again, Sunday night.

The onion crop, which has taken a terrific beating from the heavy rains, this spring, received what may be a death blow from the Saturday night downpour. Mr. Gantt states that it is his opinion that the crop is now cut by fifty percent if the late crop of young onions turns out good. Otherwise, the percentage will be worse. He had 1,400 bags of onions laying in the fields North of Princeton where they were gathered earlier in the week. The floodwaters had scattered them all through the area by Sunday morning.

Immediately following the midnight deluge, flash floods developed in a number of places. Ticky Creek, just West of Princeton, blocked Highway 24 for about an hour until the floodwaters subsided. This was in addition to the second blocking of the road by Pilot and Sister Grove, three miles East.

Railfall at Plano was light. At Dallas, Only .35 of an inch was recorded.

East Fork thundered out of its banks again, cresting about 10:60 o'clock, Sunday morning. It spread across the bottom, East of McKinney about a mile wide, came close to spilling over Highway 75 North of the city and blocked Farm Road 546 at Biggers or Lowery Crossing. Water there was more than a quarter-mile wide.

Ticky Creek again cut Farm Road 982, South of Culleoka, about a mile. Water, there, completely covered the bridge and only curve and speed signs were left to show there was a highway underneath as speedboats plowed through the area Sunday afternoon. This is partly backwater from Lake Lavon that has cut this road several times following a heavy rain.

Farm Road 543, recently built Northwestward from 75 about three miles North of McKinney, stood the big test very well. It has been high and dry during the flooding.

Water got over Farm Road 544 between Plano and Wylie at one point following the Saturday night downpour but it ran down quickly.

There is a strong possibility that this type of weather may continue for a while longer according to Captain Hall. On February 22nd, the jet stream of air that travels around the world at about 50,000 feet high and at speeds of 200 miles per hour, made a historic move. This stream of high wind is a big cog in nature's weather machine. It flows from West to East and usually strikes the Pacific Coast of the North American continent in the Washington-Oregon area. On that date, a suddenly shifted Southward, striking the coast in the Lower California area of Mexico, then sweeping Northeastward through Texas towards the East coast. It caused the big weather change from drouth to flood. It has made thunderstorms extremely easy for surface winds to form. This is the fartherest South the jet stream has ever been found. How long it will stay no one knows. It could shift back to its old track overnight. It could stay for weeks or an indefinite period. Its effect on weather in the Southwest is going to be tremendous as long as it holds to the new course.

Which of the numerous line squalls and thunderstorms that have plagued Collin County, this spring, was potentially the worst? Captain Hall thinks it was the two squalls that came through last Thursday, May 23rd. Conditions for tornadoes were perfect—a very low barometer, high humidity, high temperature. This day, in his opinion, was potentially worse than the day of the Dallas and Melissa-Anna tornadoes which was had enough in itself. Some points in Collin County registered barometer readings of 29.30, last Thursday. Chunk type hail—bigger than golf balls with ice spurs on the top and one flat side fell from West of Plano through the Allen crossroads and Biggers towards Farmersville in an afternoon storm, and the same thing occurred later near Van Alstyne. Tornado was spotted Northwest of McKinney but dissipated quickly.

This was only one of several days that could have been disastrous; it was the worst in potential.

McKinney has been lucky through this long bad spell of weather.

And, the State Highway Patrol is happy that it still cannot blame a single death in the county, on the weather, this spring.

APPLIANCE DANGER SIGNALS.

Save yourself personal injuries, fires and damage by learning to recognize signs household appliances give whe nthey're not performing as they should. Extension home management specialists point out these warning signals:

"Dimming of house lights or slwing of heating appliances when mitors start may mean that the circuits are overloaded. This could cause a fire.

"When a fuse blows the circuit may be overloaded or there may be a short in the appliance. Chances are too many appliances are on the circut at one time. Be sure the fuse is the right one for size of wiring. If the fuse will let more power through than the wiring can safely carry, it is not a safety device. Overheated wires, damaged motors and fires can result if the wrong fuse is used.

"On-off" blinking periods usually means there's a loose connection somewhere in the appliance. May not be serionus, but it should be repairred before a more serious problem develops.

"Trinagle" or slight shock when handling an appliance or switch is a sign that trouble's brewing. Inspect for loose wires or damaged insulation.

"Crumbling of rubber insulation on lamp or appliance cords can eventually expose electric wires. This can cause a short-circuit, or make metal lamp bases a serious shock hazard. Replace worn cords with new ones.

Keep these danger signs in mind . . . Act when they occur.

UNCONTROLLED NUT CASEBEARER CAN CUT PROMISING PECAN CROP

Recent rains have greatly improved the prospects for a good pecan crop in 1957. But, warns Extension Horticulturist B. G. Hancook, pecan nut casebearers can cut the promising crop by millions of pounds if they are not controlled. Now is the time to begin the control job.

The three essentials in obtaining satisfactory control of the casebesarer are listed as correct timing of spray application, proper application of spray material and use of the correct insecticide.

To be sure of the timing pecan growers are urged to check the nut clusters closely and at regular intervals for the appearance of casebearer eggs. The eggs are usually deposited singly on the tip or blossom end of the small nuts; are pearly white with bluish cast and about a third the size of a pin head. They hatch in four to five days. After hatchting, the small worm moves down below the pecan cluster and feeds on the buds in the leaf axil. The buds are hollowed and tell-tale webbing and black frazz around the bud can be seen. After four or five days of bud feeding, the worm now much larger, moves back to the nut cluster and bores a hole at the base of the pecan and enters to feed.

Because of the short period of time the worm is exposed, timing of control measures is of utmost importance. Syrays made of long residual insecticides can be applied when a number of eggs are found in the orchard. If insecticides with fairly short residual period are used, it is best to wait until some of the eggs have hatched and the worms found feeding in the buds.

Proper auplication of the insecicide must include a thorough wetting of the nut clusters and the stems immediately below. 3 pounds of 50 per cent wettable DDT or 2 pounds of 15 per cent wettable parathoin per 100 gallons of water is recommended for control.

Hancock urges pecan producers to check with their local county agent on the details of a good control program. Ask for a copy of L-245, Guide for Controlling Insects and Diseases on Fruits and Nuts in Texas.

SCORPION CONTROL.

The common scropion is crab-like in appearance and has a long segmented taillike abdomen ending in a bulbous sac and stinging organ. Scorpions are active at night, hiding during the day beneath loose stones, loose bark on fallen trees, boads, piles of lumber and within walls of buildings. Brick and stone houses are usually more attractive to scorpions than those of wood enstruction. The scorpions that occur in Texas are not considered dangerously poisonous.

For control of scropions remove or destroy acumulations of old lumber, boxes, rags, brick, wood, trash etc. Apply 5 per cent DDT or 5 or 10 per cent chlorane dust. Repeat application as ofen as needed. If severe pain or slight systemic disorder should occur as a result of the sting, bathe the affected area with a weak ammonia solution. If this does not give relief, obtain medical aid.

Phone At Fire Station For Emergency Only

Fire Chief Walter Cockrell asks the people of McKinney not to call the Fire Station telephone at the City Hall, except to report a fire.

On Saturday night when the tornado siren was sounded, many people telephoned the fire station. It is most important that they do not call the fire station, except for fire service, and tie up the line so that an emergency call can not come through

The tornado warning was sounded Saturday about midnight, for the first time since the signal had been inaugurated. Should it be necessary to sound the warning siren signal in the future, the citizens of McKinney are asked to please not call the fire station and tie up the telephones except to report a fire.

Social Security On The Farm

By MURIEL STEADMAN
Field Represenative
Dallas Social Security Office

A farmer came into our office the other day and said: "I want to apply for those farmer benefits."

He was a self-employed farmer, was over 65, and had net earnings over $400 last year and again this year. He was eligible for social security benefit payments. The monthly benefit payments he will get, however, are not "farmer benefits." There are no special benefits for farmers. He will get old-age insurance benefits, based on past work under social security just like 5¼ million other retired workers who have been employed or self-employed in offices, factories —or on the farm— long enough to be insured under the social security law. For him, as for all others, the benefits are basically intended toward replacement of income that he is assumed to have lost because of old age.

Our farmer friend, moreover, will be subject to the same restriction on earnings after retirement as other beneficiaries. Our talk with him brought out that he did not understand how earnings and work affect benefit payments. This misunderstanding is rather widespread among farmers — and there's a reason. Many farmers, unlike the self-employed man in the city, will continue to live on their place of busines after retiring from full activity. Many will not disassociate themselves entirely from farming as a business.

The social security law does not require the mto quit the farm and to stop all work in order to get benefit payments. It is possible for them, like beneficiaries in non-farm activities, to work part-time, or even to work throughout the year and get some or all of their monthly benefits payments. The number of monthly payments they will get in a year will depend on how many months in the year they work and how much they earn during the year. If a farmer earns no more than $1,200 in a year, he can get a payment for each month in the year. If he works in all months of the year, and has earnings of more than $1,200 in the year he will lose one or more monthly benefit payments. He will lose a month's payment for each $80 or fraction of $80 that he earns in excess of a yearly total of $1,200. He will not lose all 12 payments in the year unles his earnings exceed $2,080.

The above applies to the farmer who works in a all 12 months of the year. Many farmers, normally, have some months of no work. A farmer beneficiary whose work is seasonal can get a benefit check for any month in which he neither earns more than $80 in employment or does substantial work in self-employment. This is true regardless of his earnings amount during the course of the year. For example, if he earns $2,500 in a year but works in only 4 months, he will get benefit checks for the other 8 months.

Because the average farm is both the place of business and place of residence of a farmer, he may be confused over the meaning of "substantial work" or "substantial services" as the law calls it. What is meant by this is work in connection with the production of crops or livestock raised for sale and from which he will receive income as a farm operator. It does not include other kinds of work he may do on his farmstead. He will not be doing substantial work in the social security meaning of that term, for instance, if he repairs his house or raises vegetables, fruits, livestock, and poultry for consumption by himself and his family.

Some farmers before retirement have rented out their farm or part of their farm to someone else under an arrangement which called for their taking part in the production or management of production of farm commodities on the land. Under this arrangement, known as "material participation," the rental income they receive counts as earnings for social security purposes. If a farm landlord continues helping out under such an arrangement after retirement, the rental income he receives will still be considered earnings for social security purposes and will affect his right to receive old-age benefit payments.

Our social security office has leaflets and booklets explaining in detail the provisions of the social security law relating to farmers, either self-employed or employed. Every farmer should get a copy of each of them in order to understand fully his rights and his obligations under the social security law

WELL, JOHN, You and I missed it a little. Congratulations on the little lady that has taken up residence with you.

ONE THING about Your Home Towners friend, Sam Smith, is that he knows his clouds. Thursday afternoon a group of employees of the Collin County National Bank were observing the clouds that were 'rollin' around. Here comes Weatherman Smith out of the bank. "Well, they have got a lot of wind in 'em," said Smith. Very little moisture. Then it started to sprinkle—then it started to rain—then it started, well it wasn't a sprinkle, it wasn't a rain—'twas a 'down pour." Well even us Weathermen miss is sometimes. 'Tis so, Samuel, 'tis so.

Start spraying now.

Dr. T. R. Leen Guest Speaker To Lions Club

Dr. T. R. Leen, pastor of the First Christian Church, was speaker Wednesday at the Lions Club meeting held at the First Methodist Church. Lions J. V. Fagg and James Ford were the program committee for the day, the former presenting the speaker.

Dr. Leen, assuming the pastorate of the local church a few months ago has already won the hearts of the general citizenship for his interest in all community affairs. His happy disposition and persuasive personality charactize the wonderful work he is doing in the city, not only as a pastor, but as a civic and social leader.

His address at this time was on the functions of pastor counselling, which he termed "as important as any other task the minister has to perform," as he outlined values derived by parishioners from such counsel. Dr. Leen stressed the importance of emotions to the physical health of an individual, using many of his experiences as illustrations. "What happens in the mind of a man affects his body status," he stated, as he elaborated upon the emotional life of an individual in relation to his body reactions. Much wit and humor were brought into his talk as he explained the difference between fear and anxiety, and what to do about them.

Listing hostility, anger, fear and anxiety as some of the basic causes of emotional upsets, he prescribed the following simple rules for readjustment: (1) give time to analyze the situation and its possible cause; (2) evaluate all of these causes, estimating their dynamic strength; (3) decide on a course of action; (4) act; (5) lay hold of available resources; (6) practice relation and diversion introducing "balancing factors" such as hobbies, sports, social activities and church affairs; (7) bring out and analyze hostility, resentment and hate you might possess; (8) find out the truth about yourself and find out the truth about God.

Dr. Leen said "when you find out the truth about yourself you will find inside of your resources you never dreamed of, and in your renewed conception, you will find much of the anxiety in your life will be dissipated." At this time he again emphasized the fact that "the truth about God iessens anxiety," and closed with the remarks "intergrate your life around an adequate philosophy and renewed Christian faith.

Other guests for the day were J. L. Woodall Jr. of Dallas and Jim Furlong, guests of Lion George Coulter, and Dr. Kenneth M. Hay of Dallas, guest of Lion Wilbur Thompson.

In order for a litter to be Certified Lean-Meat, it first must have qualified in Production Registry; Next two pigs from the litter must be slaughtered; and then carcass data taken. The pigs must weigh 200 pounds at 180 days of age; be at least 28:5 inches in length; not have more than 1.7 inches of backfat; and have at least 3.5 square inches of loin-eye (leanmeat) in the pork shop.

Former M'Kinney Man Honored At College Ceremony Recently

An article of local interest appeared in a recent issue of the Alton Evening Telegraph, published at Alton, Ill., concerning the traditional Dads and Daughters Weekend at Monticello College. Rufus Wafer of Little Rock, Ark., was chosen King of Monticello Dads and was crowned king at the ceremony staged there. Wafer's twin daughters, Misses Martha and Sara Wafer first year students at the historic women's junior college, crowned their dad in the ceremony.

Wafer is a former McKinney man who is now residing in Little Rock, Ark. His wife is the former Miss Lois Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Thompson of McKinney.

The traditional "Dads Weekend" begins on Friday night and ends Sunday after Brunch. The day this year were May 3, 4 and 5.

The Wafer twins are attending the college on a two year scholarship, won for leadership, citizenship and scholastics. Their older sister, Miss Marybeth Wafer, also attended the same college, on a two year scholarship. She is now attending Arkansas University and is a member of Delta Delta Delta Sorority.

The following article outlines some of the activities of the event which will interest the many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Wafer in this city.

GODFREY — Hotels and motels in the area said "No Vacancy" signs up today as several hundred father and mothers of Monticello College students arrived for the traditional Dad's Week-end.

The campus was bustling with parents and their daughters rushing through a schedule that kept the visitors and students busy from Friday until they leave Sunday.

Friday night restaurants in the area were jammed as fathers escorted their daughters on the customary dinner dates.

Regular Alton diners, unaware that the town was flooded with visitors, were turned away from seome of the restaurants or had to wait as long as an hour at others before being seated.

There was no shortage of food at any of the eating places because Monticello authorities had alerted restaurants far in advance.

Tonight the daughters and their fathers will have a "dancing date." Mother are not encouraged to go along on these traditional dates.

Schedule for the first time called for the crowning of a "King of the Monticello Dads." Rufus Wafer, of Little Rock, Ark., and father of twin daughter, Sara and Martha, who are first year college students, was given the crown, royal cape and a scroll. The scroll attested that he will rule on all "affairs de coeur, smorgasbord and similar frivolities of the Monticello Dads and Daughters with the utmost dignity and decorum of the period of one year by order of his daughter."

It was too late to change the elaborate scroll lettering to the plural daughters" because no one considered that the King of Dads might have twins attending the college.

Drs. Harriss And Myers To Attend Chiropractors Meet

Dr. D. W. Harriss and Dr. Hugh W. Myers of McKinney are expected to be among the more than 500 Texas chiropractors attending the 42nd annual convention of the Texas State Chiropractic Association in El Paso June 13-15.

Added importance has been attached to the convention by the passage of a state law this year that requires all licensed chiropractors to attend at least one post-graduate refresher course a year before they can be re-licensed. Such a course will be given during the El Paso convention. Chiropractors will be subject to re-licensing by a state board on January 1.

A 1949 law set up strict educational requirements (two years of college study in basic science subjects plus four years of study at a chiropractic college) before an original license could be granted. The new law thus assures the public that a chiropractor is not only qualified at the time of his original license, but that he continues his educational pursuits to keep abreast of scientific developments in the healing arts each year thereafter.

Three outstanding health authorities will be among the convention speakers. They will include Dr. Thure C. Peterson of New York City, president of the Chiropractic Institute of New York who received national fame as a hero in the Andrea Doria ship disaster last summer; Dr. Clyde Martyn of Los Angeles, a national director of the Lions International and an executive director of the National Chiropractic Association, and Martin C. Wukasch of Austin, senior engineer with the Division of Occupational Health of the Texas State Department of Health, who will speak on "Control of X-ray Hazards Through Regulation."

Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Harvell of Corinth visited in the home of Misses Bethel and Rhoda Jones and Clifton Jones, in Blue Ridge.

Mr. and Mrs. Willard Terry of Blue Ridge spent the week-end in Grand Prairie with Mrs. Orlis Trantham and children, Pat and Michael.

New Pulpit Is Installed At First Christian Church

Because of the increased attendance that the morning service of the First Christian Church of McKinney, it was necessary to make the East overflow area of the sanctuary more available to those who are in attendance. In order that both the people in the main sanctuary of the church and the East overflow area may hear and see the participants in the service, the Official Board of the Church voted to install a new octagonal shape pulpit, which was built by Allen Rouse and Finley Rominger. The electrical work was done by Andy Rogers and his son.

Eighty percent of the people in the East overflow area of the sanctuary can now see and hear the participants in the service and the minister as he delivers his morning sermon. Provision was made in the construction of the pulpit for the placement of the public address system and recording system within the pulpit area itself. Since the pulpit has been installed there have been increases in attendance at the morning services.

An additional step was placed in the center of the sanctuary area. The Communion Table was centered on the platform of this area. This makes the Communion Service a decided feature of the Morning Hour of Worship and also provides a better area within the sanctuary for special services such as weddings, funerals, etc.

This project was made possible through the contribution of the Fellowship Class. This Class contributed $100.00 in order to make the project possible.
